

Happy NEW YEAR ☐☐

I'm sending positive vibes out into the universe that 2021 is kinder to us than 2020 was.

Christmas was crazy in our house. It was our turn to host my hubby's family for Christmas dinner, so we had 32 people in our house. (We're extremely lucky where we live that COVID-19 isn't an issue and we were allowed to have normal Christmas celebrations. New Year's was a quiet affair, watching the final sunset over the Indian Ocean and toasting at midnight with my love.

My learning curve has continued since my last email—so much to learn in order to bring a story from the inside of my head to you, the reader. It's always great to learn new things, it keeps the mind active, but this learning curve has been mind-boggling (literally) ha!

I have to confess, Loving Summer has been completed for some time, but I've been waiting until I have the first draft of its companion novel completed before I hit publish. The longer I sit on the completed book, the more I begin to question whether it's really any good or not. I guess it's not for me to judge, but for you guys to decide—and I really hope you all fall in love with Oliver and Kate, the way I have. Actually, I've already licked Oliver, so he's mine. 😊😊

I'm hoping to release my debut title at the end of February or early March, so keep an eye out, because I'll be calling out for ARC readers. If you're interested in being included on my ARC team, shoot me an email because I'd love to have you on board.

As a treat for you, my dedicated newsletter subscribers, I'm proud to reveal the cover and blurb for Loving Summer for the very first time. Eeek! I can't believe this moment's finally here.

Woah! I just realized I've put my release plans out into the universe now, so it really has to happen! 🙏😊

Maybe if I put my intentions out into the universe this year, it'll help to keep me accountable, let's hope it works ...

I'm aiming to publish at least two books this year.

What do you hope to achieve this year, ?

REVEAL ... Loving Summer

What can a single-minded billionaire CEO and a kind-hearted kindergarten teacher possibly have in common?

Oliver

Spending all my time focusing on making money and building my business doesn't leave much time to socialize, but I'm not complaining—it keeps my heart safe. Experience has taught me that people are not interested in me as a person, only for what I can do for them.

... until Kate.

She's like the sun shining through gloomy gray clouds. She sees me for the man I am, not what my bank account can do for her. I can't forget her, and I don't understand why, but I'm not walking away.

Will I be able to convince Kate my intentions are genuine?

Kate

Spending my free time volunteering and looking after my elderly neighbor doesn't leave much time for a relationship, but I don't mind—it makes me happy. Past relationships have shown me it's always better to focus on everyone else's happiness.

... until Oliver.

He's the hottest, most generous man I've ever met. He sees something in me no other man ever has before. I can't forget him, and I don't understand why, because he's way out of my league.

Can I move beyond past hurts to have a future with him?

Would you like to read the first three chapters before anyone else?

YES, give it to me NOW!
